Sponsorship Prospectus

Partner with us as a sponsor for the 2026 International Conference on Mycorrhiza held in Cairns, Australia

The International Mycorrhiza Society, the umbrella society of the biennial International Conference on Mycorrhiza (ICOM), is dedicated to advancing education, research and development in the field of mycorrhizal symbiosis. Mycorrhizal fungi form vital symbiotic relationships with the roots of most plants, enhancing plant growth and productivity. Beyond this, these charismatic fungi support soil biodiversity and health, making them key players in ecosystem stability and restoration.

Our members range from research scientists and students to policymakers and land managers. We research both managed and natural ecosystems. Our members specialise from the largest of scales, including landscape ecology, through to the smallest of molecules by applying molecular biology techniques.

Our work is of international significance; our conference attracts delegates from across the globe, with members from over 40 countries and an attendance of 450 to 600 people from academia, government and industry.

The theme for ICOM2026 is “Mycorrhizas in a changing world: challenges, opportunities and solutions”. The goal of bringing together hundreds of delegates to focus on how our research can be applied is more relevant than ever, as harnessing the power of mycorrhiza will enable us to unlock smarter, more sustainable and more profitable solutions for global agriculture and forestry systems.

We hope you choose to support this valuable conference, knowing that your investment in mycorrhizal science positions your organisation at the forefront of ecological innovation and sustainable growth.

Four Plenary Themes

The conference will be held over six days (July 12-17, 2026), featuring plenary talks, parallel sessions, poster sessions, workshops and social events. The main conference is broken into four days planned around four principal themes covering evolution, fundamental biology, ecology and application:

- Moving forward while looking into the past: how the evolutionary history of mycorrhizas informs future adaptation pathways
- Genomic pathways and regulatory networks: molecular foundations of mycorrhizal adaptation and host interactions
- Mycorrhizas in dynamic ecosystems: plant and fungal biodiversity, biological invasions, soil and impact of climate
- Opportunities for mycorrhizas in climate adaptation and mitigation: what's working, what's needed and why.

Location

Australia is renowned for its diverse flora and fauna, featuring quintessential species such as kangaroos and koalas, as well as unique and colourful birds and marine life, alongside an incredible array of plants. But beneath the soils of this beautiful continent lies a greater diversity of life, with mycorrhizal fungi supporting forests, grasslands and agriculture. Due to this, per capita, Australasia boasts an incredible number of mycorrhizal researchers, making it a hotspot for ecological and molecular study of these amazing fungi and a sought-after destination for international collaborations.

Hosted at the newly renovated and expanded Cairns Convention Centre, paired with a social program that will enable all participants to experience Australian nature at its best, this conference will provide numerous opportunities for research groups from around the world to mingle and foster new collaborations. Caught between the Great Barrier Reef and lush rainforests, Cairns is a city for the connoisseur, the historian and the adventurer alike. With a commitment to sustainability, inclusion and reducing our environmental impact, we have designed a conference experience that maximises modern and well-catered convenience while maintaining a low carbon footprint.

Rising Star Plenaries: Support of Diverse Early Career Researchers

A major focus of the scientific organising committee for ICOM2026 is to highlight and encourage young researchers from around the world. One way we do this is by continuing a relatively recent tradition of past ICOMs hosting 'Rising Star Plenaries'. Given by four invited early-career researchers from a range of expertise and backgrounds, these talks offer a unique opportunity for the speakers to present in-depth research findings and to take centre stage at the ultimate global conference in their chosen field. Past Rising Stars have gone on to establish award-winning research groups and mentor the next generation of scientists. By supporting Rising Star Plenaries, sponsors play an active role in the career progression of these promising young people.

Extensive Brand Opportunities

Your participation supports the advancement of research and professional development of mycorrhizal biologists working to develop mycorrhiza-focused initiatives that empower regenerative solutions to climate change, degraded soils and ecosystem loss. Almost 500 delegates attended ICOM2024 in Manchester, UK.
